Stories. Becky Cooper collects hand-drawn maps of people's Manhattan stories.

If you drew a map of Manhattan, what would your landmarks be?

For one man, a smattering of dots marked six wives and three lovers. Notably, the third, fifth and sixth wives were plotted about a block apart.

A second cartographer noted at the tip-top end of Manhattan: "ruined a kickball game by kicking ball into Hudson." Slightly farther south is the note: "FIRST CRUSH I was 27."

These maps, and 73 others, are part of a collection by Becky Cooper, titled "Mapping Manhattan: A Love (and Sometimes Hate) Story in Maps by 75 New Yorkers," out of an art project Cooper started in 2009.

She handmade hundreds of blank maps using a letterpress at school, and hid 300 of them around

Memorable stories

"I definitely have maps whose circumstances I remember more than others." Cooper the city, in the Waldorf and the backseats of taxis, hoping people would stumble across them. She printed her P.O. box number on the back, expecting people would fill them out and send them back to her.

But she said that none came back — until she had a conversation with a boutique owner downtown who caught her trying to stash a map in the store. Cooper explained the project, and a week later received a map in the mail from that woman.

"The conversation had invested her enough in the project to return the map," Cooper said.

After that, she and her roommate walked Manhattan, from Marble Hill to Battery Park, with a shoebox of maps, and handed them out to strangers.

Her book chronicles that walk, recounting little stories about the people she encountered. The text of the book is, in fact, her own map of Manhattan.

She said the second-to-last map in the book, which portrays a four-decade-long relationship with a late wife, broke her heart when she received it.

"There isn't an overwhelming amount of emotion that would allow you to distance yourself from it, but you can feel his loss." That sender had put his own return address on the map, so she searched his name online and discovered the eulogy he wrote for her in a local paper.

"He said, 'She was the most wonderful person I've ever known,'" Cooper recalled. "I just lost it."

Cooper had the chance to meet that mapmaker at a reading recently.

He told her that making it had helped him to remember things about his wife as he was trying to cope with losing her.

"He thanked me for allowing him to capture that particular Manhattan," Cooper said.

Fill out the map at the top of the page and send it to allen.houston@metro.us. The best ones will run in an issue of the newspaper.

Bust yields $2M in meth, heroin

Three men were indicted yesterday on drug trafficking charges after investigators in the New York State Police Special Investigations Unit traced a drug trail from a hand off in the Bronx to a stash house in Corona, Queens.

The bust, which happened on April 9, yielded 10 pounds of heroin and nine pounds of crystal meth.

about $960,000, and the heroin could be sold for $1 million on the street.

New York State Police Superintendent Joseph D'Amico said the drug trafficking ring "poured literally pounds of deadly, illicit drugs into the streets of Queens and beyond."

A search of the Queens stash house uncovered a ledger pertaining to "ice" transactions, $2,000 hidden inside a vent, and supplies for making meth, including masks, grinders and a scale.

Investigators believe the meth originated from "megalabs" in Mexico.

According to the Department of Health, emergency room visits related to meth more than doubled between 2004 and 2011, jumping from 214 to 576.

Lopez scandal remains issue for NY speaker

Scandal. Vito Lopez may no longer be Sheldon Silver's colleague, but he may still be the New York house speaker's problem.

Sheldon Silver / GETTY IMAGES

Calls for an investigation into Silver have developed into calls for a coup, as women's groups, government watchdog organizations and newspaper editorial boards rail against the speaker.

Silver is being criticized for arranging a confidential settlement with staffers who filed sexual harassment complaints against Lopez.

Assemblyman Micah Kellner, running for City Council, told the New York Times the investigation into the confidentiality agreement needs to include "who proposed it, who wrote it, and who required it."

Lopez was cleared of criminal charges, but a 68-page report by the New York State Joint Commission on Public Ethics detailed shocking behavior.

A source told the Daily News that Governor Andrew Cuomo is leaving Lopez's seat vacant until a primary can be held in September, in order to prevent Lopez from being able to exert control over his replacement in a special election.

City too ready to settle NYPD lawsuits: Kelly

Ray Kelly says that more cases involving police should go to trial. / GETTY IMAGES

Just the facts. Ray Kelly said that the city is too willing to settle cases against police officers.

Following a Daily News report of a Brooklyn narcotics officer receiving a promotion after costing the city more than $1.5 million in settlements, NYPD Police Commissioner Ray Kelly blasted the city for opting for settlements too frequently.

"The city is too willing to settle the case," Kelly said to the Daily News. "We need a lot more trials and efforts to determine the true facts in many of these allegations."

Some of the nearly 60 cases involving the narcotics officer involved racial profiling and slurs.

The City Council has been discussing legislation that would create more stringent anti-profiling laws, which opponents say could open up the NYPD to frivolous lawsuits.

In a public safety address to NYPD captains recently, Mayor Michael Bloomberg said these lawsuits would result in officers spending time in courtrooms when they could be out on the streets keeping the city safe.

No More Mr. Nice Watch

Forget sleek and subtle, the Stauer Colossus Hybrid is one tough timepiece...now for less than $50!

Never underestimate your competition. Just ask Demetrius, the unfortunate Greek general who set out to conquer Rhodes in 305 BC. He assumed that a massive force of 40,000 men, a fleet of Aegean pirates and an arsenal of wall-smashing war machines would be enough to crush the tiny Greek island. He was wrong. The Rhodians were tougher than he thought. And so is this watch. If you've always believed that the biggest, baddest watches had to cost big, bad money, the $49 Stauer Colossus Hybrid Chronograph is here to change your mind.

A monument to toughness. The people of Rhodes were ready for Demetrius and repelled his attack. To celebrate, they built the Colossus of Rhodes, a 107-foot bronze and iron giant that towered over the harbor like a ten-story trophy. It warned future invaders that "Rhodes is tougher than you think." You give the same message when you wear the Stauer Colossus.

The timepiece that works twice as hard. The Colossus Hybrid Chronograph will keep you on schedule, but it's about much more than time. The imposing case features a rotating gunmetal bezel that frames the silver, black and yellow face. You'll find a battalion of digital displays on the dial arranged behind a pair of luminescent hands and a bold yellow second hand. Powered by a precise quartz movement, the watch is doubly accurate in analog and digital mode.

The Colossus is packed with plenty of handy extras including a bright green EL back-light for enhanced nighttime visibility, a tachymeter along the outer dial and a full complement of alarms and split-second countdown timers. It secures with a folded steel bracelet that highlights a row of striking dark center links. It's a rugged watch that's more than ready for your daily grind.

More watch for less money. Big-name watchmakers raise their prices because they can get away with it. But Stauer wants to turn luxury on its head. We sent the Colossus Hybrid to an independent appraiser who works with auction houses, luxury estate sales and insurance companies. He valued the watch at $199.* We thanked him for his professional opinion and then ignored it. Because we still want you to wear it for ONLY $49.

Your satisfaction is guaranteed. Wear the Stauer Colossus Hybrid Chronograph for 30 days and if you are not 100% thrilled with your purchase, return it for a full refund of your purchase price. But once you get a taste of more watch for less money, it's likely you'll be back for more... and we'll be waiting.

WATCH SPECS: -Easy-to-read analog/digital modes -Back-lighting & luminescent hands - Tachymeter, countdown timers & alarms - Folded stainless steel bracelet fits a 6 3/4"-9" wrist

The end. The Doors keyboardist Ray Manzarek dead at 74

Doors founding member Ray Manzarek is dead at the age of 74. The keyboard player, who contributed greatly to the band's signature sound on songs like "Light My Fire" and "Riders on the Storm" lost a battle to bile duct cancer in a clinic in Germany yesterday.

Ever since Doors singer

Jim Morrison died in 1971 at the age of 27, Manzarek was crucial to preserving the band's legacy.

He was instrumental in overseeing posthumous Doors releases and was even vocal about his dislike for the way his friend was portrayed in the 1991 movie, "The Doors."

Dozens dead in huge Oklahoma tornado

Deadly weather. Suburbs near Oklahoma City were hit hard by the storm, which flattened a school.

A deadly tornado with winds of up to 200 miles per hour devastated the Oklahoma City suburb of Moore yesterday, ripping up at least two elementary schools and a hospital and leaving a wake of tangled wreckage.

At least 51 people have been confirmed dead from the huge tornado, a medical official said, and the number is expected to rise.

The powerful tornado, rated the second-highest strength level of EF4, touched down at mid-afternoon and devastated a wide area of the town.

Television video showed tracts of homes destroyed, cars tossed about and piled atop one another, and at least one building on fire.

Rescue workers pulled third-graders from the devastated Plaza Towers Elementary school in Moore. At least seven children from the school were counted among the dead. Aerial video showed first responders sifting through the rubble yesterday night.

"I have never seen anything like this in my 18 years covering tornadoes here in Oklahoma City. This is without question the most horrific," said Lance West, a reporter for KFOR. REUTERS

Taking the heat. More calls for officials to take blame in IRS flap

Pressure was building yesterday for the Obama administration to fire more people linked to the Internal Revenue Service's extra scrutiny of conservative groups, possibly including another top IRS official.

More than a week after a mid-level IRS employee apologized publicly for IRS agents' use of terms such as "Tea Party" and "patriots" to target groups' applications for tax-exempt status, Congress was preparing for two days of hearings on the matter.

Lois Lerner, chief of the IRS tax-exempt unit, is scheduled to testify tomorrow to a Republican-controlled investigative committee of the House of Representatives, along with other officials. Lerner's apology for the IRS targeting on May 10 at a legal conference in Washington set off the furor.

President Barack Obama fired acting IRS Commissioner Steven Miller on Wednesday. Some lawmakers, both Democrats and Republicans, are calling for Lerner to go next as the scandal continues to unfold, distracting Obama from his second-term legislative agenda. REUTERS

President of Myanmar visits the White House

A press for peace.
Obama urges Myanmar to stop violence against its Muslims.

President Barack Obama urged the president of Myanmar yesterday to take steps to halt violence against Muslims in his country and move ahead with economic and political reforms.

Thein Sein became the first head of Myanmar to visit the White House in 47 years. He and Obama sat down for talks in the Oval Office.

Obama said the Myanmar leader had assured him that he intends to move forward on releasing more political prisoners and institutionalizing political reforms that have already taken place. Sein vowed to resolve ethnic conflicts by incorporating all communities into the political process, Obama said.

"I also shared with President Sein our deep concern about communal violence that has been directed at Muslim communities inside Myanmar. The displacement of people, the violence directed toward them, needs to stop," Obama said.

Sein, speaking through a translator, said his country faces a "daunting task" in carrying out reforms but said for democracy to flourish in Myanmar, the reforms must be carried out in the years ahead.

Myanmar will need the "assistance and understanding" of the international community, including the United States, as it goes through the process, he said.

Rights groups and some U.S. lawmakers fear Obama has moved too quickly since forging a dramatic breakthrough in relations in 2011 after half a century of military rule in Myanmar, also known as Burma.

U.S. officials argue that reforms by Myanmar's quasi-military government are transformative and deserve support from Obama, who confirmed the end of Myanmar's pariah status with the West with a landmark visit last November.

Yahoo promises not to screw up Tumblr buyout

Hello, kids. The $1.1 billion purchase gives the company a platform in social media.

Yahoo Inc. will buy blogging service Tumblr for $1.1 billion in cash, giving the Internet pioneer a much-needed social media platform to reach a younger generation of users and breathe new life into its ailing brand.

The deal, announced yesterday, is a bold bet by Yahoo CEO Marissa Mayer to revitalize the company by co-opting a Web property with strong visitor traffic, but little revenue.

The combination of Yahoo and Tumblr creates an online powerhouse with roughly 1 billion users, which will draw in more advertisers and help Yahoo keep visitors on its properties for longer periods of time, Mayer told Reuters in an interview.

Yahoo made clear it was sensitive to concerns that it might damage Tumblr by making it less irreverent or more corporate.

"Per the agreement and our promise not to screw it up, Tumblr will be independently operated as a separate business," Yahoo said in a statement.

Looking for love in all the Prague places

Rail passengers searching for love in the Czech capital need look no further than the daily commute as the city makes plans to designate carriages on its underground trains for singles. Prague transport company Ropid wants to set aside carriages on some or all of its trains for singles seeking a soul mate — a service that could launch by the end of this year. / GETTY IMAGES

Bought in blood

Gandhi blood sample up for auction

Two microscope slides bearing the blood of former Indian leader Mahatma Gandhi are to go on sale in London today and are expected to fetch from $15,200 to $22,800.

The slides were obtained in 1924 when the father of the Indian independence movement was recovering from an appendectomy near Mumbai. He was thought to have donated the blood to the family he was staying with at the time.

"To Gandhi devotees, it has the same status as a sacred relic to a Christian," said Richard Westwood-Brookes, a historical documents expert at Mullock's auctioneers, which is selling the item.

"It is an artifact [that] is revered by disciples of Gandhi, particularly in India, and therefore that is the sort of person who would go for it," he said.

Stewart's humor a hit in China

Laughter in the dark. The Chinese look toward the satire-loving comedian for inspiration.

Humor may not always translate well. But Jon Stewart is picking up millions of fans in China, where his gloves-off political satire is refreshing for many in a country where such criticism is a rarity — especially when directed at their own leaders.

A recent segment on North Korea scored more than 4 million views on microblogging site Sina Weibo, and even stodgy state broadcaster CCTV has used Stewart's "The Daily Show" in a report — though it wouldn't let a Chinese version of him near its cameras.

Recent popular sequences have included one in which Stewart lam-

Stewart is the comedian heard 'round the world. / GETTY IMAGES

Quoted

"Being a journalist, you have to find out the truth. If there's ... something that hurts the public interest, you have to stand out, no matter how sharp the thing is. You have to stand out and say that's not right."

Mao Moyu, a Shanghai journalism student who got hooked on Stewart pooned the Chinese hackers who went into the New York Times computer system earlier this year, wondering if that was the best they could do.

But far from squelching Stewart, CCTV even used one of his sequences on Guantanamo Bay to criticize Obama in a regular broadcast — a move widely derided by netizens.

In China, however, such criticism tends not to be welcomed by the government. Dissident artist Ai Weiwei, who regularly criticizes the government for what he sees as its flouting of the rule of law and human rights, was detained for 81 days in 2011, sparking an international outcry.

"There's nothing like political satire here," said David Moses, who studies and writes about Chinese humor.

Though the exact timing of Stewart's entrance to China is unclear, many have been watching him for four or five years, mainly through the Internet and Sina Weibo.

Part of Stewart's popularity is that he seems cool to young people in love with all things foreign, but a thirst for satire that is not afraid to show its face contributes too, Moses said. REUTERS

Web of accountability

China trying to manage exposure of corruption

China's Internet is brimming with disclosures of officials casually collecting bribes, homes and luxury accessories.

But while the government tolerates such anti-corruption vigilantism, it is also extremely leery of the threat the Internet can pose to Communist Party rule.

While acknowledging that China's online world is helpful, authorities have also moved quickly to quash rumors that might fan protests that could escalate out of control, deleting microblog posts and even entire accounts. REUTERS

Metro dominates as the most-read free newspaper in the Big Apple

No. 1. Metro is reaching an all-time record of readers in the New York area.

Metro has gained nearly 100,000 daily readers in the last year, as well as strengthened its grip as the most-read free daily newspaper in New York, according to new figures that were just released.

The market research company Scarborough said that Metro reached an all-time record of 733,311 people over the age of 18 in the New York area, a whopping 15 percent increase over the same period in 2012. Every week, Metro reaches more than 1.5 million adults in New York in print and online — that's 124,000 more than its competitor amNewYork.

"Thanks to our readers

Metro reached 733,311 people over the age of 18 in the New York area. / CYNTHIA M. REED for making us the most popular free newspaper in New York," Yggers Mortensen, Metro US publisher and CEO, said. "We continue to grow, innovate and find new ways to engage New Yorkers and deliver impact to advertisers both in print and online."

Metro's success can be attributed to 400 new newspaper boxes throughout the city as well as a concentrated focus on a re-launched website, Metro.us, a redesign of the print edition and interactive features such as Blippar, a newly augmented reality app.

According to the Scarborough data, Metro has the highest proportion of readers who are 18-49 years old, a demographic regarded as highly desirable by advertisers. In addition, 76 percent of readers are employed — and 1 in 10 are planning to buy a house or condo this year.

CULTURE

Twitter feed

We check in with some of Hollywood's biggest names to see what they've been up to — in their own words, in 140 characters or fewer.

Today, Justin Bieber is feeling a whole lot of love, Channing Tatum likes a good bit of wisdom, Lena Dunham is choosing her words carefully and John Cleese smells a conspiracy.

@justinbieber: "I love music, my fans, my family, my friends ... And I love The Lord."

@channingtatum: "Go where you are celebrated — not tolerated. If they can't see the real value of you, it's time for a new start. —Unknown"

@lenadunham: "Under the right circumstances, I'd love to murder someone — something I'm glad I've never said in an interview."

@JohnCleese: "Why haven't they told who was elected vice pope? Is it a cover up?"

KStew splits yet again

The on-and-off relationship between Robert Pattinson and Kristen Stewart is currently off. "All this stuff came up," a source close to Pattinson, 27, tells Us Weekly about the reason for Split #234. The source told the magazine that Pattinson blew off a birthday party planned in his honor by Stewart. The two have been fighting "about the cheating, about how selfish she always is, about how moody she always is," the source explains. Moody? Kristen Stewart? You don't say.

Three years later, Demi Lovato still thinks about Joe Jonas

It's been three years since her brief romance with Joe Jonas, but Demi Lovato is still talking about it. "We were in a relationship and we broke up, and at one point I was really mad at him," Lovato tells ABC's Nightline. "When you go through heartbreaks and things like that, you always have in mind somebody. It's like when you hear a song on the radio that reminds you of somebody, you're going to be reminded."

Ugh. Sometimes (and only sometimes) I feel for celebrities. Imagine having to constantly talk about an ex to major news outlets years after your fling. I cringe just thinking about it.

Miley Cyrus and Justin Bieber: The remix?

It looks like Miley Cyrus and Justin Bieber are working on a song together.

"I know pictures are flying around," Cyrus told E! at the Billboard Music Awards. "You guys will have to wait and see. I'm the biggest at top secrets. I've had this single ['We Can't Stop,' to be released June 3] ready for about a year, and I've had to keep my lips sealed and just not say anything. So you'll see."

Cyrus says this one is for her fans. "I feel like this song really is for them and how I feel — that I can't stop and I'm going to be who I am, and they should be who they are and that they can't stop, and [no one] can stop us."

The singer has been spotted leaving Bieber's recording studio in the past. So as long as they are working on a single together — and not a baby — I'm totally fine with it.

Tattoo artist Kat Von D says: 'Go Big or Go Home'

Interview. The artist doesn't compete with men: "I get cramps once a month, but that's it."

In her third book, "Go Big or Go Home," acclaimed tattoo artist and reality star Kat Von D delves deep to tell stories from her own life and experiences she's shared with clients. Chock-full of photos of tattoos in various stages of completion and the people who wear them, the book sheds light on the personality, process and profession of one of the tattoo world's brightest stars. We had a few questions for her about the arts of ink and writing.

What made this book more challenging to write than your other two?

I've always been an open book — no pun intended. It's just a little bit more profound on an emotional level. I want to be as open and honest as possible, even in all my flaws.

You're known for your portrait work. How did you get into that?

I was doing a lot of them [on television] and got a reputation for portraits. I love black and gray realism. So I could do a portrait of a paper clip, or a person, and I'd still get excited. It's more about the textures and accuracy.

You're in a boys' club. What's it like being a female tattoo artist?

I go back and forth on that subject. Although I feel lucky to be a girl because it's fun to be a girl, I get kind of annoyed by these uber-feminists who make gender such a big part of who they are. I don't think gender should define you. I've always wanted my work to speak for itself. So, as for the challenges of being in a male-dominated field? I get cramps once a month, but that's it.

On tattoos

Von D: Openly devoted to you

"There's this negative stigma surrounding people with tattoos," says Von D. "But I've always thought it's a form of being openly devoted to something, and that's a very rare and great quality to have. You listen to people's stories and really get to know somebody. I like the idea of being connected to a piece because you know it's valued to the client."

From Metallica to good old fashioned "Metal," Jason Newsted has pared down his approach. / CHRIS LASCANO

... And justice for Jason Newsted

'Metal' health.
Ex-Metallica bassist Jason Newsted is ready to stand on his own two feet.

Though Jason Newsted has popped up in a few notable projects since quitting Metallica in 2001, his new band is all about him.

"It's a big deal," he says. "There's a few different hats I'm taking on: I'm the frontman, it's my songs, it's my voice."

It's also his name. In the tradition of Van Halen, Santana or even Bon Jovi, the name of the band is the same as the name of the man. This is a bigger commitment than participating in Dave Navarro's made-for-reality-TV band, Rock Star Supernova, and the bassist seems acutely aware of that.

Quoted

"It's a big deal. There's a few different hats I'm taking on: I'm the frontman, it's my songs, it's my voice."

Jason Newsted, on his new band, Newsted

"It's nervous excitement," he says. "It's a giant challenge."

Newsted formed six months ago when the band's namesake started writing songs with guitarist Jessie Farnsworth and drummer Jesus Mendez Jr., and they recorded a thrashy four-song EP as tight and terse as its title: "Metal." In February, Staind guitarist Mike Mushok joined and, though we couldn't get the band's leader to reveal its title, a full-length is ready for release by fall.

Through summer, Newsted has 70 gigs worldwide, including gigs in England, at the 100 Club and the Download Festival, the same two places he played in 1987, launching his first full-length with Metallica, "... And Justice For All."

"I did retire from the big thing so I could do what I want with my life. Jumping back into it is different from what I planned to do, but you have to create challenges when you have all the time in the world. This is the biggest that I've created for myself in a long time."

'Full-on dedicated'

Quitting Metallica wasn't easy for Newsted. But Metallica — driven and ambitious, but stung by the loss of original bassist Cliff Burton, whom Newsted replaced — was never an easy band to be in. "I am the man who had to step up and make that decision for EVERYONE," Newsted emphasizes of his decision to leave in 2001. "It was me that suffered the most. It was me that made the giant sacrifice. It was a horrible, hard decision. I still, every couple of days, think about it even now. I was the first one into the show and the last one out. I wore a Metallica T-shirt onstage every night. I flew my colors, I was full-on dedicated."

City Doubles Down on Teacher Training

Historic Changes Coming to Classrooms

CITY FUNDS FOR TEACHER SUPPORT
TOP $100 MILLION

Pivotal Moment for Students

New York's public schools will get a boost of support from hundreds of coaches this fall. But instead of hitting the basketball courts, they're headed to classrooms.

Schools Chancellor Dennis M. Walcott has set in motion a major push to improve the skills of the city's teachers. He announced he will double the city's investment in teacher support to more than $100 million.

The coaches' goal will be to train principals and others to observe teachers in action, pinpoint their strengths and weaknesses and help them improve.

The focus on teaching is a response to the Common Core standards, which have raised the bar for school kids, and a 2010 state law that overhauled an outdated teacher evaluation system. The new system, which goes into effect this September, will introduce historic changes to how teachers are assessed and trained.

"It's a new era in our public schools," the Chancellor said. "We're expecting more from our students and their teachers."

The Department of Education's investment of more than $100 million is intended to ensure that teachers and students will be ready to meet these new challenges.

"We can't expect to raise standards for students without doing the same for teachers," Walcott said. "It's especially urgent in wake of the Common Core, the most dramatic change to education in our lifetime."

Straight Talk from the Chancellor

Schools Chancellor Dennis M. Walcott responds to parents' questions

How is my child going to benefit from this new teacher evaluation system?

Teachers will be encouraged to learn from their peers, collaborate, share ideas, and brainstorm to identify new ways to engage children.

We're raising standards for our kids through the Common Core, and we need to raise the bar for teaching and institute accountability. Next year you'll see more support in our schools to make sure our teachers are encouraging your child to learn at his or her full potential.

Why do I hear so much about accountability? What does it mean?

We want to improve the quality of teaching throughout the public school system. Teachers are one of the most important influences on a child's life. If your child's teacher is struggling, we need to know so we can support him or her.

What's wrong with the current system? Why change it?

The teacher evaluation system simply doesn't work. We need a better way to measure performance so that principals can give specific support to their teachers and students.

When it comes to our students, we're always evaluating how they're performing, where they're excelling and where they need help. It's time we do the same for teachers.

Currently, they are rated either Satisfactory or Unsatisfactory. But we all know there aren't just good or bad teachers—some are excellent, some great, some average, and some in need of improvement. The new evaluation system allows principals to form a more concrete picture of how their teachers handle student behavior, encourage class discussion, and more.

We're putting our money where our mouth is by doubling our investment in professional development

Are teachers going to be ready for the new evaluation system? What are you doing to prepare them?

Our schools help students tackle tough subjects, and we're prepared to help your child's teacher tackle the evaluation system.

We're putting our money where our mouth is by doubling our investment in professional development to over $100 million. We're providing training for our teachers through a partnership with The Danielson Group, an organization that supports teacher development and evaluation in districts throughout the country.

We've also updated our citywide instructional expectations to give teachers specific guidance on what we want to see in a classroom and to help schools set clear goals for teachers. Over 250 schools piloted the new evaluation system so that we could better understand what works and what doesn't.

A lot of other resources are being developed online, like webinars, videos, articles, and interactive tools for teachers to use, as well as a help desk for educators who have questions about the new evaluation system. We're here to listen to any concerns they have.

I'm committed to making sure your child's teacher is a great one. We're all in this together.

It Works!

That was the overwhelming opinion of teachers and principals who were part of the first wave of educators to receive intensified coaching.

Over 8,500 teachers took part in a study that was designed to prepare the city for the new teacher evaluation law, which spells out some of the most dramatic teaching reforms in New York history.

Soon, all 75,000 teachers in the city's public school system will experience the new and more personalized approach to instruction.

In the study, teachers received one-on-one feedback from principals and were coached to improve. Schools also piloted a new, no-stakes evaluation scale that rated teachers as Ineffective, Developing, Effective, or Highly Effective. This more detailed system was compared to the Satisfactory/Unsatisfactory evaluation method.

Scoring showed that the coaching brought the skills of teachers and principals to new heights.

Janine Meyer, a seventh-grade teacher, was encouraged by the new coaching. "It's about what's best for the kids, and if I'm not asking them the right questions, if I'm not challenging them enough, then I want to know," she said.

One principal in Brooklyn,

Cynthia Fowlkes, praised the new approach. "Going into the classroom and giving that meaningful, frequent feedback to teachers really drives high-quality instruction," she said.

Out With the Old, in With the New

of principals believed they could better identify their best teachers under the new evaluation system.

84%

of principals said the new teacher evaluation system improved their students' performance.

What is the Teacher Evaluation Law?

Across America, parents are demanding better schools and better instruction. President Obama created his Race to the Top program as a result.

In May 2010, New York State passed Education Law 3012-c as part of its participation in Race to the Top. It requires every school district in the state—including New York City—to develop a better way to evaluate teachers and principals.

The state regulations discard the old pass/fail system for assessing teachers and replace it with a more detailed system that uses clear criteria to rate teachers into four categories—Highly Effective, Effective, Developing, and Ineffective. The city has spent the past two years preparing for the implementation of this law, which will debut this September.

This Year We're Aiming Higher

This year, state exams for students in grades 3-8 have been different and more challenging. And test scores will reflect that at first.

We're raising standards. Under the new Common Core curriculum, students will be writing more. Thinking critically. Defending their ideas. Working in teams to solve real-world problems.

We're not satisfied with just teaching your children basic skills. We want them prepared for college and a career.

No diaper? No problem, with EC

Toilet training. The new parenting trend is “elimination communication.” What is it, and how can you implement it at home?

It seems impossible: A baby — many times not much older than newly born — goes to the bathroom directly into the toilet and not a diaper. Devotees of “elimination communication” say that it can happen. Christine Gross-Loh has been preaching this alternative to toilet training for years; her book, “The Diaper Free Baby,” has been the instruction manual for EC devotees since it was published in 2007. Here she gives advice on being No. 1 in the “number two” business.

How is EC different from regular toilet training?

The most basic difference is that you start EC earlier, before a child has become so used to eliminating in diapers that potty training is a whole new transition he has to get used to (and may be resistant to). Babies are born with this awareness of elimination, but as they become used to eliminating in a diaper all the time, they lose that awareness — and have to work on becoming aware again when they reach the age of conventional toilet training. EC-ed children are often out of diapers completely at or before the age when most children are just beginning to embark on potty training.

What advice do you have for working parents who live in cities who may want to try EC?

EC can be done during the evening or on weekends. Even if you are at home with your baby full-time, you may not be doing EC full-time. It's easy to have some diaper-free time during the evening, or sit your baby on the potty before and after his bath. Doing EC does not mean you have to ditch diapers completely.

EC for every parent

Gross-Loh aims to make “The Diaper Free Baby” accessible to all types of parents and she writes for three categories: Full-Time, Part-Time and Occasional EC-ers.

She also includes a support group within the book that includes inspiring testimonials and tips throughout every chapter.

What are some drawbacks to EC? Benefits?

It's hard to do anything when it's not a cultural norm — you may get less support and less information. Information about EC — about typical stages, about the logistics — is really key. Luckily, the information and support is out there as more and more parents do EC. And there are so many great reasons to give it a try: There are communication benefits (you learn to read your baby just as you learn how to figure out when he is hungry or sleepy), environmental and economic benefits (you go through fewer diapers) and health benefits (less diaper rash). Finally, you are not relying on diapers so much that your child becomes reluctant to let go of them, a problem that some parents face when doing conventional toilet training.

Why do you think EC has taken off in recent years?

I think it's because there are so many parents out there who know more about the world around us. They know that in cultures around the world, it's not at all the norm for a baby older than 1 to be in a diaper (if he was ever in a diaper at all). When you know that this isn't a universal thing, it makes you feel more open to understanding why and how this is, and to realizing there are some viable lessons here for us. When I had my first child 13 years ago, I had heard of EC but thought of it as a black-or-white endeavor — you either do it fully or you don't. I simply couldn't imagine how you could make it work in a culture where we have so many homes with carpets! But my experiences showed me that you can do it to any degree that works for you. Even if your baby sits on the potty just once a day, there are benefits.

Problems with newer pertussis vaccine

Vaccinations.

The rate of whooping cough has been climbing in recent years. Could a new version of the vaccine be to blame?

A newer version of the whooping cough vaccine doesn't protect kids as well as the original, which was phased out in the 1990s because of safety concerns, according to a new study.

During a 2010-2011 outbreak of whooping cough in California, researchers found that youth who had been vaccinated with the newer, so-called acellular vaccine were six times more likely to catch whooping cough than those who had received a series of the older whole-cell vaccine.

"This is an ongoing saga," said Dr. H. Cody Meissner, a pediatric infectious diseases specialist from Tufts University School of Medicine in Boston.

The rate of whooping cough, or pertussis, has been climbing in recent years, he said — to the point where "we're worried about losing control of pertussis in the United States."

The pertussis vaccine is given in combination with vaccines for diphtheria and tetanus.

Originally the shot contained whole pertussis bacteria, which triggered reactions in some babies — including prolonged crying, fever and a "shock-like state," said Meissner, who wasn't involved in the new

The new whooping cough vaccine has less side effects. But does it work as well as the old one? / CREATAS research.

So in the 1990s, the U.S. switched over to an acellular version of the vaccine, which has reduced the rate of side effects.

"But the price we've paid to get more safety is that we have less effectiveness," Meissner told Reuters Health. "It doesn't protect as well against pertussis."

Any new shot for whooping cough that could address both safety and effectiveness concerns is still years away, Meissner said.

"So now we're confronted with this difficult problem," he said.

"It's very hard to recommend a vaccine that is known to be associated with more side effects than another vaccine that's safer, even though the first vaccine gives better protection. It's a dilemma."

The findings do not mean parents shouldn't get their children fully vaccinated against pertussis, the researchers agreed.

"In the short run, we have to keep vaccinating kids on the recommended schedule — because that's definitely the best way to protect kids," Klein told Reuters Health.

"The acellular vaccine does work, it just doesn't last as long as we hoped," she said. "It's the best tool we have right now to protect against pertussis."

Use cover to expose the cover-up

Re: 'Graphic cover not needed to make a point' (Metro, May 17-19) I congratulate Metro for showing the exact results of the factories' deep greed. I believe any other way of expression would simply strengthen the corrupt system that's supposed to protect these workers and further the financial gains of the factory owners even while knowing how poorly their factories operate. I believe such exposure creates hope. The photos simply reported the reality of what's happening, to prevent more deaths. There is no need for a preventive format in the paper. I consider it hypocrisy.

A study in errors

Re: 'Too broad a brush: How a minority is getting a voice' (Metro, May 20) This demonstrates the dangers of stereotyping any minority, not just AAPI. Any attempt to place them in a grouping, and assign any characteristic to them, is foolish. This also goes for almost every other ethnic or religious group on the planet. The problem with trying to stereotype people based on arbitrarily assigned criteria is that you almost always get it wrong.

Is the customer always right?

Books. An editor at the Chronicle of Higher Education takes aim at consumer culture within higher education.

Before stepping into his current role as editor-at-large at the Chronicle of Higher Education, Jeffrey Selingo was a reporter there for 14 years. His first book — “College (Un)bound: The Future of Higher Education and What it Means for Students” — was released last week by Harvest Books. We asked Selingo for his input about the increasingly complex world of higher education.

What has changed in higher ed since you began writing about it?

As prices go up, people have more questions about what they get from higher education. I think more and more, students treat it like any other industry they consume. Although, I also argue that students have to be savvier about their consumer choices in education. Most parents and students still pick colleges in a very emotional way.

What comes out of that emotional response?

We have a very romantic view of higher education: big-time universities, quads, small classes, gothic buildings, football weekends. But in reality, students and parents are buying a product. They need to know if they're going to graduate on time, if they'll get a job, what their debt load will be and who's going to be teaching them.

How has this student-consumer shift changed education?

Students have a lot more expectation [than they did previously]. They are the customer, and the customer is always right. As a result, we've seen grade inflation. The classroom has turned into a giant favor exchange. Part-time faculty need to please students to get good course evaluations. Students want to get good grades, because they're paying a lot of money. There's not much academic rigor at some colleges.

BRUCE WALSH

The big tech question

How will technology change higher ed?

I don't think online institutions will replace thousands of colleges. Some people really believe that. If you talk to 18-year-olds, they don't want to go to school online, they want the typical residential experience. I think [technology] will be injected into that traditional model. There will be more hybrid courses and more students will watch lectures online. Then they'll go to class for the high impact class, where you really need human interaction.

New York City's Best Kept Secret: BRAMSON ORT COLLEGE

What makes a school stand out from the rest? Many New York City Colleges claim to offer great educational services and programs, but there is one college that stands out as the best kept secret in affordable non-for-profit private school education. Located in the heart of the beautiful Queens and Brooklyn neighborhoods, Bramson ORT College has recently received much attention with the addition of the Game Design and Programming, Renewable Energy, and Paralegal Degree Programs. The school has been viewed as an oasis of career opportunities for inner city youth. The Queens and Brooklyn Campuses also offer Degrees in Accounting, Business Management, Business Management Online, Medical Assistant, Administrative Assistant, Professional Billing and Coding, Electronics Technology, Computer Networking, Graphic Design, and many more.

Class sizes are small, so students get the individual attention they need in a hands-on environment. The faculty are professionals with classroom and industry experience. In addition, the school offers GED Prep classes for the community. What is most impressive is that Bramson ORT College is part of an international World ORT Network that focuses on technology-driven education and training that has transformed the lives of millions of graduates.

In today's tough economy, students and parents of High School graduates should consider the benefits of such a school as Bramson ORT College that provides low tuition coupled with great scholarships and educational opportunities. As the popularity of the school's programs spreads throughout its campuses, the college might not be a "secret" for much longer. The school is close to major transportation, including the E, F, N, R, M, and D subway lines. For more information call (866) 854-5014 or visit the website at www.BramsonORT.edu.

You're Unique. Your Education Should Be Too

Sometimes knowledge doesn't fit into categories. That's why SUNY Empire State College has a different approach to getting a college degree.

One of the unique features of studying at Empire State College is the opportunity to design a degree program based on your individual goals. You can design an undergraduate degree tailored to fit your educational interests without having to negotiate between rigid departments or structured majors. You can build a degree that's individualized, or you can take a more traditional approach. Whatever option you choose, your degree will meet SUNY's general education requirements.

The college provides a flexible way to learn for adults who have many responsibilities. You can work one-to-one with a faculty mentor at one of the 35 locations across New York State, take online courses and complete your degree totally online, participate in study groups, attend weekend residencies to explore topics in depth or register at other accredited colleges for a more traditional college experience. Through a combination of onsite and online study, study groups, residencies and cross-registration, students build credit toward their unique degree.

As part of the State University of New York, Empire State College tuition rates and fees are among the lowest around. Many students are eligible for financial aid in the form of grants, scholarships, loans or employer tuition benefits, which makes a SUNY degree even more accessible.

The college offers nine master's degree programs for students who need to work full time in the following disciplines: business, management and leadership; education; liberal studies; and policy studies. Graduate students complete courses online and several degree programs require participation in regional, group meetings or attendance at occasional weekend residencies. The college also offers 12 online graduate certificates designed to provide focused study to support career interests in such areas as Human Resource Management, Health Care Management, Project Management, Nonprofit Management, Veterans Services, Public History, Global Brand Marketing, Financial Management and Analysis, and others.

Who would have thought? Dr. Charles Drew did in 1938. The Blood Bank, developed by Dr. Charles Drew, is just one of the many life-changing innovations that came from the mind of an African American.

We must do all we can to support minority education today, so we don't miss out on the next big idea tomorrow. ## NFL. Jets back Mike Goodson meets with team about arrest Mandatory organized team activities begin tomorrow for the Jets, but running back Mike Goodson was in camp yesterday — and in this case, early wasn't good.

Goodson was arrested over the weekend for possession of marijuana and a handgun. He will likely head to court on June 12, right in the middle of the team's June minicamp.

As for yesterday, Goodson reportedly spoke to general manager John Idzik and the coaching staff about his arrest.

Owner Woody Johnson, in Boston for the NFL owners' meetings, said the team was still "investigating the facts." METRO

NBA. Former Nets top pick arrested on gun charge in Washington

Celtics guard Terrence Williams was arrested Sunday after Washington police said he brandished a gun at the mother of his son during a visit.

Williams was drafted by the Nets in 2009 with the No. 11 pick and spent part of two seasons with them. He played with Boston this season. METRO

By the numbers

8.4

Terrence Williams, the former first-round pick of the Nets, averaged 8.4 points per game as a rookie and was named Eastern Conference Rookie of the Month with New Jersey in April 2010.

Shumpert: Knicks' season was failure

NBA playoffs.

The veteran-laden Knicks were dealt a harsh assessment by their young star.

Professional sports are mostly about wins or losses — which explains Iman Shumpert's view of the 2012-13 season.

"We failed. We didn't do what we were supposed to do," Shumpert said during his season-ending exit interview session with the media on Monday.

Despite earning the No. 2 seed in the Eastern Conference and winning 54 regular-season games, Shumpert doesn't look back fondly on a season that ended far earlier than he, his teammates and the rabid fan base expected.

"At least the Eastern Conference finals," said Shumpert, when asked his minimum expectations for the Knicks this postseason.

Vegas baby

Shumpert said the coaches want him to play in Las Vegas summer league, and added he's excited about doing so because he desires to be "under coaching and under coach's wing" all summer.

"We knew we were supposed to go further, and we didn't."

Shumpert, who spoke barely above a whisper during his session, seemed wise beyond his years when discussing the current state — and forthcoming prospects — of the Knicks.

"We just have to hold each other accountable," Shumpert said. "Come next year, little things like not playing hard should never come into play."

Setting a standard

Anthony feels team can win

Carmelo Anthony thinks the future is bright and that this team can contend.

"We've set a standard, [and] kind of teased the city of New York a little bit, because now everybody expects us to play at this high level. Eventually something has to happen. We want to win the championship, that's the goal."

Anthony also said he will have his left shoulder, injured in the opening round against Boston, checked out and see if he needs rehab. TONY WILLIAMS

Felton: 'We had a great year'

Raymond Felton painted the rosier picture of any of the veterans.

"I'm going to say it was a great year. It was a great year, great run. Definitely a huge step from years in the past [and] something to build on," Felton said. "Definitely not satisfying but, you know [we] can't really be too upset. I think we had a great year overall. We did a lot of special things this year. So all this is about now is just capitalizing and building on it."

Rangers face two-game deficit for second series

NHL playoffs. The Bruins have jumped out to an early advantage, but John Tortorella is not concerned.

The facts paint a bleak picture for the Rangers.

For the second straight series, they return to the Garden in a 0-2 hole. According to Elias Sports, no team in NHL history has won consecutive Stanley Cup playoff series after spotting opponents the first two games as the Rangers have done.

The Rangers have been outscored 8-4 in the first two games of the conference semifinals. Only three players — Brian Boyle, Carl Hagelin and Anton Stralman — have a positive rating after the first two games. The power play is 0 for 8.

And their goaltender appeared to injure his shoulder in the final moments of Sunday afternoon's 5-2 loss in Game 2.

With all of that said, head coach John Tortorella painted a much different picture.

"I thought we played a much better game in the second game," Tortorella told reporters after the Rangers' practice in Greenburgh, N.Y., yesterday in preparation for Game 3. "I'm very optimistic as far as where we're going as a team."

King is ready

Lundqvist brushes aside Game 2 injury

The biggest reason for head coach John Tortorella's confidence is Henrik Lundqvist, who appears likely to play in Game 3.

Lundqvist, the reigning Vezina winner, tweaked his arm in the third period of Sunday's loss while making a diving save.

"I landed on it awkwardly and it hurt a little bit, but it's under control," Lundqvist said. "Everybody is sore. It's the playoffs. You can't sit out because it's hurting a little bit. It happens. You have to do the right things to keep it going." DENIS GORMAN

Second thought

Defense back to original

It appears as if the customary top defensive pairing of Ryan McDonagh and Dan Girardi will be reunited in Game 3.

According to reports, the two skated together during yesterday's practice session. DENIS GORMAN

NHL playoffs. Bruins defensemen to make trip, status unknown

The Bruins got some good news yesterday — that is, if they even want their trio of injured defensemen back.

Wade Redden and Dennis Seidenberg will both travel to New York for Game 3, though head coach Claude Julien was not certain if they will play. Andrew Ference, the third injured defenseman, appears unlikely to play.

In the absence of the three veterans, Dougie Hamilton, Matt Bartkowski and Torey Krug have been excellent. Krug made his career start in Game 1 and has scored his first career goals in the first two games of the series.

SNORING?

As recommended by Dr. Gifford-Jones M. D.

Here is proof that snoring can be corrupting your health and your marriage. Three out of 10 couples are considering divorce because of snoring says a major magazine article. You are not alone! An official survey says 48% of all people snore. 75% are affected, if you add non-snoring husbands that have snoring wives or vice versa. Snoring is caused by slack muscles in the throat. A common complaint is that people feel that they are not well rested in the morning. Many people wrote they are now sleeping like a babies. Their partners are delighted. This natural health product Sound Sleep #23 usually helps the first night. No side effects.

■ College professor had lack of good sleeps with many interruptions for last 8 years that made her tired during the day. Within 3 days taking Bell Sound Sleep #23 the terrible snoring stopped. Heiges, 77, New York, NY* ■ A life changing product. The very first night I took the capsules and every night after I had a restful and wonderful sleep. It has been a God send and blessing. I am by nature a skeptic. The money-back guarantee convinced me to try it. Jimmy Pay, 53, Gardendale, AC ■ 3 Years on Bell Sound Sleep #23. My wife and I are entirely satisfied. Snoring episodes have completely disappeared. This has improved our lives enormously. Leo Fortin, 60, St-Georges, QC ■ Basically you saved my husband's life. For the last 5 years my husband had very bad nights. Bell #23 was nothing short of a miracle. I have my husband back. No more snoring. No more napping during the day. I am telling all our friends. Bonnie Johnson, 64, Wichita, KS ■ My life changed. Sleep now 7-8 hours. I am a retired college professor and author of books. I have no more need to nap during the day. Nothing I tried helped until I started Bell Sound Sleep. I am so delighted with this product I would like to make motivational speeches to help others. Carmen V. Caruso, 66, Ann Arbor, MI On the Bell Website we list phone numbers or email addresses of actual users of this product and all other Bell products. Most are delighted to talk about their relief.
